Appendix

1. The successful applicant belongs to the Research Group of Agrobiolgy and Bioresources, Division of Fundamental Agriscience Research, Research Faculty of Agriculture, Hokkaido University. The research group consists of ten laboratories, namely, Crop Science, Crop Physiology, Plant Pathology, Horticultural Science, Ornamental Plants and Landscape Architecture, Animal Ecology, Systematic Entomology, Plant Genetics and Evolution, Cell Biology and Manipulation, and Pathogen-Plant Interactions. These laboratories conduct education and research in the field of agrobiolgy and bioresources in cooperation with each other.

2. The successful applicant will partly or fully give the lectures listed below, for which the Laboratory of Horticultural Science is responsible.

(1) Subjects in the Graduate School of Agriculture: Study on Agricultural Science I • II, Seminar on Agricultural Science I • II, Advanced Botany and Agronomy, Advanced Seminar on Botany and Agronomy, Advanced Horticultural Science, Advanced Seminar on Horticultural Science, and others.

(2) Subjects in the School of Agriculture: Introduction to Horticultural Science, Pomology, Vegetable Crop Science, Special Course of Agrobiolgy and Bioresources, Laboratory Work on Agrobiolgy and Bioresources I • II, Experiments in Biology and Chemistry I • II, Seminar on Agrobiolgy and Bioresources I • II • III • IV, Graduation Thesis, and others.

(3) Subjects in general education: Freshman Seminar and others.

3. The Laboratory of Horticultural Science has conducted education and research for many years on fruit trees, vegetables, and edible wild plants (such as wild vegetables and small fruits) produced in the northern regions.

These activities include clarifying the physiological and ecological characteristics that form the basis for cultivation and breeding of these plants, utilizing plant tissue culture methods, preserving the freshness of fruits and vegetables, evaluating genetic resources, and developing cryopreservation techniques. Recently, the laboratory has also focused on research regarding the components in fruits and vegetables that affect human health maintenance.

4. The Diversity and Inclusion Promotion Headquarters of our university is implementing various initiatives in addition to the project to subsidize the employment costs of technical assistants as shown in the attached document. (Results for FY 2025)
